About Me

I was first inspired to learn Spanish when I went to Mexico with my youth group in 7th grade - I later dedicated my schooling to it and have taught everywhere from Kindergarten to college. I have taught at City Tree for 4 years now and have loved following each child as they move up through the grades - seeing them grow and develop. I hope to instill a love for language and how it opens us to new aspects of God's amazing world.

Education

I have a degree in Spanish and Int'l Affairs from the University of Puget Sound. My junior year was spent in Argentina perfecting my Spanish and honing my love for culture. I later completed some graduate work in Latin American literature before starting a family.
